I urgently appeal, then, for a new dialogue about how we are shaping the future of our planet. We need a conversation which includes everyone, since the environmental challenge we are undergoing, and its human roots, concern and affect us all. (Laudato Si #14)

This week we celebrate Laudato Si for unmasking the impacts of our throwaway society on communities that are most vulnerable to global crises such as pandemics and climate change and for calling us into dialogue to shape collective solutions.

We invite you to

- Reflect on key quotes from Laudato Si (in Italian, English and Spanish)
- Read about how covid-19 is disproportionately devastating communities, especially low-income communities of color, already made vulnerable by air pollution
- Join other people of faith in urging U.S. legislators to build environmental and economic justice into covid-19 relief and recovery legislation. You may send a message to your lawmakers through Ecumenical Advocacy Days here.
