

How to Access the Institute Reconciliation Process

Through our Chapter 2017 Recommitment, we shared our hope to strengthen our relationships with one another through reverence, availability, and the healing of personal and communal wounds.

As in any other living setting, conflicts occur in our lives together. During those times, our Constitutions call us to “speak the truth in love, bring prayer and patience to the restoration of harmony.”

What to Do in Conflict

- Make time for dialogue
- Seek objective insight and assistance from a facilitator, mediator or spiritual director.

If the group is still simply unable to resolve matters among themselves, they may access the Institute Reconciliation Process.

Participants in the process must be prepared to:

- listen to others
- be vulnerable
- trust the process
- abide by the outcome

The Institute Reconciliation Board will serve as resources to anyone in need of assistance. Their aim is to restore quality of life among us as we pursue integrity of word and deed. You are invited to view board resources online to find out how to reach members.
